

A dummy all day keeps talking away!

Letting your baby have a dummy to calm them when they are upset or tired is fine but you should try to wean them off it when they start to babble or at least by 12 months of age.

If your child is finding it difficult to give up their dummy, contact your Children's Centre or your health visitor for support.

When I want to play or talk
PLEASE take my dummy out